courses in the Cognitive Science Program should an opening arise.

Screening of applicants is ongoing and will continue as needed. The number of positions varies from semester to semester, depending on the needs of the program. Positions may range from 33% to 100% time per term (i.e. teaching load of 1-3 courses during the Fall, Spring or Summer term).

Due to COVID 19 UC Berkeley will begin the spring semester with fully remote instruction. UC Berkeley is prepared to implement hybrid and/or flexible modes of instruction as soon as public health conditions allow. Remote instruction may be synchronous, asynchronous, or a combination of both. Instructors must have internet access and be prepared to adjust pedagogical approaches with a remote setting and use new teaching tools.

Basic qualifications: (at the time of application): Advancement to candidacy in a PhD (or equivalent international degree) program.

Additional qualifications: (by position start date): A PhD (or equivalent international degree).

Preferred qualifications: A commitment to, and experience with, undergraduate teaching, preferably in the areas of Cognitive Science, Linguistics, Computer Science, Philosophy, Psychology or Neuroscience. Must demonstrate ability to teach effectively in a dynamic learning environment. Must demonstrate experience with, and deep knowledge of, interdisciplinary inquiry and research as connected to the study of the mind. Ability to communicate effectively and contribute to diversity and equal opportunity.

In addition to teaching responsibilities, general duties include holding office hours, supervising GSIs (if applicable), assigning grades, advising students and preparing course materials, e.g. syllabus.

The Cognitive Science Program is interested in candidates who will contribute to diversity and equal opportunity in higher education through their teaching.
