The successful candidates will have a commitment to excellence in teaching, research, and mentoring students. Faculty will teach doctoral program core psychology courses, as well as electives in her/his own specialty areas. The teaching load is contingent on research productivity and/or service activities. For Positions 2 to 4, candidates must be actively involved in scholarship, with expectations to maintain an ongoing program of research, peer-reviewed publications, and student research supervision. The most desirable candidates for Positions 2 to 4 will have active funding to support their research.

The Department is dedicated to the principles of excellence, equality, and respect for all individuals. We seek candidates with a commitment to promoting diversity, inclusion, and multicultural competence in an educational environment.

Nova Southeastern University is a not-for-profit university that meets the U.S. Department of Education's criteria as a Hispanic-serving institution. NSU awards more doctoral and professional degrees to Hispanics and all minority groups combined than any other university in the United States. NSU is also second in the U.S. for professional degrees awarded to African Americans. The University and Department place a high priority on the creation of an environment supportive of diversity in faculty and students, a core value of the university. NSU is located in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, approximately 25 miles north of Miami.

The Department of Clinical and School Psychology offers APA-accredited Ph.D. and Psy.D. programs in clinical psychology, an APA-accredited Psy.D. program in school psychology, and a specialist program in School Psychology. The Department also houses 2 APA-accredited pre-doctoral internship programs and a postdoctoral residency. The Department trains students at its Psychology Services Center, which serves a diverse population of children, adolescents, and adults through its general and faculty-directed specialty clinical training programs.
