Job Description

The UB Social Development Lab examines the development and prevention of aggressive behavior, peer victimization, and bullying behavior among young children. We have several federally funded school readiness projects in the lab testing the transition from preschool to kindergarten. We are looking for a full-time Postdoctoral Associate who will serve as a project director for a 5-year NIH supported clinical trial testing a teacher implemented with coaching social and emotional skills program in preschool classrooms.

We use multiple methods (i.e., observational, child interviews, psychophysiological) and approaches within longitudinal designs to answer key questions about social development to inform prevention efforts. The incumbent will report to the principal investigator (Dr. Jamie Ostrov, Professor of
