Overview

The Department of Economics is one of the largest departments in Arts and Sciences, and Engineering. It has twenty-four full-time faculty, approximately fourteen part-time faculty, a large undergraduate program, graduate program, and PhD program. Office staff assist with student questions, with management of the undergraduate and graduate programs and with other essential department activities. The graduate program has doubled in size in the past eight years, and we anticipate more growth in the future. Professor Douglas Gollin's ongoing and new research projects are related to development economics and agricultural economics.
