Position description

The Goldman School of Public Policy (GSPP) at the University of California, Berkeley holds the #1 US News and World Report rankings in Policy Analysis, #2 in Social Policy, and #4 in Environmental Policy and Management. We are committed proudly to equity and justice for the public good.

We seek applicants for a tenure-track, Assistant Professor position in the area of Global Development Policy: Climate, Energy, and Environment.

Successful applicants will have a research, teaching and public impact program focused on local, regional, and global resource use, human well-being and environmental sustainability. Focal areas may include, but are not limited to: energy, water or other resource access and management; climate adaptation or mitigation strategies including how the history, drivers, impacts and potential solutions to systematic inequality across gender, socioeconomic or other dimensions of human society; the role of extreme events as existential threats to communities, nations, and regions; the energy transition in emerging economies; short- and long-run tradeoffs and opportunities for environmental sustainability in the context economic; climate as a cross-cutting development and equity challenge; and geopolitics and political economy of natural resource management, infrastructure, and climate change.

Successful candidates will bring quantitative, qualitative, and/or computational, or mixed methods to their research and teaching. Methods that consider justice principles (e.g., equality, equity, need) as it interacts with climate change and development are of particular interest.

The successful applicant's faculty line would rest within GSPP. Ideal candidates will be prepared for an intellectually and methodologically rigorous academic setting, working with an exciting and energetic group of faculty committed to public impact and change. should have an existing track-record of independent or collaborative research excellence, experience or aspirations to teach and be actively engaged in a professional graduate school setting, and a commitment to interdisciplinary perspectives and collegial service. We encourage applications from individuals with an understanding of, and commitment to, the public university mission, as well as a familiarity with schools of public policy. Prior policy-related work experience is desirable. We will consider scholars completing their PhD in Spring 2025, as well as those currently serving in post-doctoral or assistant professor positions.

GSPP has identified energy and climate policy as a strategic area of investment. The new hire will bolster existing assets such as the Center for Environmental Public Policy (CEEP), the India Energy and Climate Center (IECC), and Masters of Development Practice (MDP) degree program, as well as new initiatives related to global climate policy leadership curriculum, research projects, and events. Additionally, UC Berkeley has a rich climate and sustainability research community that extends across many campus units, research centers focused both topically and geographically, as well as programs centered at Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory, in the Energy and Resources Group, and in a number of centers and research clusters, including the Center for Environmental Public Policy, the Center for Law, Energy and the Environment, and the Roundtable on Climate and Environmental Justice. The successful applicant will have diverse opportunities to engage with and build research and teaching connections with these cross-campus units from their base in GSPP.

The Goldman School of Public Policy is committed to addressing the family needs of faculty, including dual career couples and single parents. We are also interested in candidates who have had non-traditional career paths, who have taken time off for family reasons, or who have achieved excellence in careers outside academia. For information about potential relocation to Berkeley, or career needs of accompanying partners and spouses, please visit: <http://ofew.berkeley.edu/new-faculty>.

The University of California is committed to creating and maintaining a community dedicated to the advancement, application, and transmission of knowledge and creative endeavors through academic excellence, where all individuals who participate in University programs and activities can work and learn together in a safe and secure environment, free of violence, harassment, discrimination, exploitation, or intimidation. Consistent with this commitment, UC Berkeley requires all applicants for Senate faculty positions to complete, sign, and upload an Authorization of Information Release form into AP Recruit as part of their application. If an applicant does not include the signed authorization, the application will be considered incomplete, and as with any incomplete application, will not receive further consideration. Although all applicants for faculty recruitments must complete the entire application, applicants will only be subject to reference checks if and when they are selected as the
