as part of the growing Bachelor of Science degree program in Quantitative Social Science. The successful candidate will work alongside interdisciplinary colleagues in the School of Humanities, Arts & Social Sciences (HASS) to teach students to combine technical skills with the ability to think critically and creatively.

Stevens Institute of Technology, founded in 1870, is located in Hoboken, NJ, directly across the Hudson River from New York City. Stevens students, faculty, and staff leverage their collective real-world experience and culture of innovation, research, and entrepreneurship to confront global challenges. HASS contributes to the mission of Stevens with programs that engage in research and creative activity at the intersection of science, technology, the arts, humanities, and social sciences in ways that benefit society.

The School of Humanities, Arts & Social Sciences values diversity and seeks candidates who can contribute to a welcoming climate for students. Stevens is an NSF ADVANCE institution committed to equitable practices and policies. We encourage qualified women and minority candidates to apply.

Candidates interested in applying should prepare an application that includes

- cover letter
- current C.V.
- teaching portfolio (including a statement of teaching philosophy, sample syllabus, and measures of teaching effectiveness, if available)
- names and contact information for three references (these can be listed on the candidate's CV or submitted as a separate document)

NOTE: please submit only the materials listed above. The list below is generalized for all faculty and is not required for this position.

Review of applications will begin on January 15, 2025 and continue until the position is filled.

Specific questions about the position can be directed to Dr. Kristyn Karl, Search Committee Chair, by email to kkarl@stevens.edu.
