Department of Psychology

The Department of Psychology resides in CSU's College of Natural Sciences, along with seven other departments: Biochemistry and Molecular Biology, Biology, Chemistry, Computer Science, Mathematics, Physics, and Statistics. The Psychology Department serves approximately 1400 undergraduate student majors and 100 graduate students, with roughly 30 full-time tenure-line faculty members distributed across five doctoral programs: (1) Applied Social and Health Psychology, (2) Cognitive Neuroscience, (3) Cognitive Psychology, (4) Industrial and Organizational Psychology, and (5) Psychological Clinical Science. The department also has full- and part-time teaching faculty, an outstanding team of professional undergraduate-advisors, administrative staff who provide office, travel, research, pre- and post-award support and other administrative assistance, and an IT team who support its teaching and research computing infrastructure, including remote computing and data storage and management of the Department's large undergraduate research participation system.

The Department is primarily located in the Behavioral Sciences Building (BSB), a LEED Gold-Certified building completed in 2010 and expanded in 2014. The BSB includes office space for full-time faculty and graduate students, meeting and seminar rooms, state-of-the-art classrooms, and numerous lounge and study areas. In total, the Department has over 100,000 square feet of research, teaching, and office space. More information on the Department can be obtained at: <http://psychology.colostate.edu/>

Psychological Clinical Science at CSU

The successful candidate will have a full-time appointment in the Department of Psychology and will contribute to Department undergraduate teaching and graduate training in our APA accredited Psychological Clinical Science program.
